

POLICE PREDICT APPREHENSION OF CHILD'S SLAYER

Detention of Aged Man and Taxi Driver Leads To Prediction

DRIVER HAS STORY
Says He Drove Young Woman
With Suitcase to Scene
In June

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—(INS)—Detention of an aged man and a taxi cab driver by Camden police today as material witnesses in connection with the discovery of the bones of an 8-year old girl near National Park, N. J., last Saturday by two little girls led police to predict the slayer of the child would be apprehended within 24 hours.

The aged witness, George Parks, 64-year old watchman of the New York shipyard in Camden, told the police he had not seen his daughter for several months. He was unable to tell what had happened to her or her children. His missing daughter was formerly a cabaret singer and chorus girl, Parks said.

The cab driver told of driving a woman with a heavy suitcase to the vicinity of the spot where the child's skeleton was found. It was about June 9 last, he said. The woman asked the driver to wait while she returned some dishes she had borrowed. A few minutes later she returned apparently with an empty suitcase and he drove her to a rooming house in Camden, according to the taximan's story. Inquiry at the rooming house revealed the young matron had left there for Philadelphia several weeks ago.

Thus far local detectives have been able to trace the woman up until a few days ago. They are confident her arrest is imminent.

Miss Ethel Taylor Is Hostess To Few Friends

Miss Ethel Taylor, of Roosevelt street, was hostess to a few friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Taylor, of Roosevelt street, on Saturday night.

Three tables of pinocle players were arranged and favors were given to Mrs. Earl McEuen, who received high score; Mrs. Charles Powell was second high and Mrs. Arthur Ford was awarded the consolation prize.

A delicious repast was served to the guests at a late hour. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Earl McEuen, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ford, Mrs. Henry Roth, Miss Ethel Taylor, Joseph Winslow, all of Bristol, and "Scotty" Rankin, of New York.

Tendered Surprise On Her Birthday Anniversary

A birthday surprise and Halloween party was tendered Miss Helen Taylor, of Bath street, on Saturday evening, in honor of her twentieth birthday anniversary.

Miss Taylor had been invited to partake dinner that evening at the home of Miss Carrie Rapp, of New Buckley street, and afterwards, the young ladies walked to Miss Taylor's home, where her guests greeted her, much to her surprise.

The rooms were attractively decorated in the Halloween colors. A large birthday cake formed the centerpiece on the table and favors were orange baskets, snappers and hats.

The evening was pleasantly spent playing various games, and a light supper was served at a late hour to the following guests:

Misses Beulah Stackhouse, Helen Appleton, Marion Arensmeyer, Betty Wilkinson, Virginia Young, Carrie Rapp, Hilda Taylor, May Shields, Helen Taylor; Messrs. Edgar Opydke, Samuel Rogers, Arthur Peterson, John Fridlinger, James Douglass; Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, and Mrs. Anderson, of Bristol; and Harold Zimmer, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO HOLD CARD PARTY

There will be a card party given Friday evening by the Newport Road Chapel in the Newportville Fire House. There will be free transportation from Bath and Otter streets Bristol.

CHANGE IN POLLING PLACE

Voters of the First Ward, First Precinct, today will vote in the building formerly occupied by the late Frederick I. Kraft, on Radcliffe street, adjoining the Bristol Trust Company.

The polls will open at seven o'clock in the morning and remain open until seven o'clock this evening.

Do not forget, if you are a voter in the First Ward, First Precinct, that today you vote in the building next to the Bristol Trust Company, instead of at the fire house of Bristol Fire Company, No. 1.

Will Choose Cast Soon For High School Play

Preparations are actively under way for the selection of the cast, chorus and dances for the musical comedy, "Page the Prince," which is to be staged here at the Bristol High School Auditorium on the evenings of November 21st and 22nd for the benefit of the Bristol high school student body.

The personnel of the cast is expected to be complete within the next week when a professional director from the John B. Rogers Company of Ohio will arrive to conduct first rehearsals and make final classifications. The Rogers Company will be remembered for their very successful presentation here of "Spanish Moon" and "Page the Prince" is expected to surpass any of the former productions as reports from other cities have been most enthusiastic.

PRETTY WEDDING OCCURS IN ST. MARK'S CHURCH

Charles McIlvaine Weds Miss
Mary Kelly at High
Noon

BY THE REV. FOGARTY

A very pretty wedding occurred at high noon today when Miss Mary Kelly, of Otter and Linden streets, the daughter of Owen Kelly, of Philadelphia, became the bride of Charles V. McIlvaine, the son of Mrs. Mary McIlvaine, of 809 Radcliffe street, at St. Mark's Church. The Rev. Joseph Fogarty, assistant rector of the parish, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Madeline Rodgers, of Philadelphia, was bridesmaid, and Edward J. McIlvaine, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride was handsomely gowned in a brown velvet dress, made with long lines and circular in effect and having long sleeves. She wore a brown soleil hat and brown suede slippers to match and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid, Mrs. Rodgers, wore a beautiful rust colored satin crepe dress, a soleil hat to match and black suede slippers. Her gown was made on the same lines as the bride's. She also carried bronze colored chrysanthemums in an arm bouquet.

Miss Kathryn B. Keating, of Bristol, presided at the organ. Lohengrin's wedding march was played as the wedding couple entered the church and Mendelssohn's as they were leaving. Several selections were played by Miss Keating before the ceremony.

Miss Catherine I. Keating, of Langhorne, was the soloist. As the guests were assembling Miss Keating sang "I Love You Truly," and during the ceremony she also sang "O Promise Me."

Following the ceremony a reception and luncheon were held at the Hotel Hildebrecht, Trenton, N. J., which was attended by the members of the bridal party, the Rev. Joseph Fogarty, Mrs. Mary McIlvaine, Mr. and Mrs. Neal J. McIlvaine, the Misses Mary, Theresa, Anna, Margaret, Kathryn and Regina McIlvaine, Mr. and Mrs. James McIlvaine, Miss Mary Doyle, Thomas P. Farrell, Miss Kathryn Keating and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hellman, of Bristol; Miss Catherine I. Keating, of Langhorne, and Mrs. E. Coursault, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. McIlvaine, upon their return from their honeymoon, will reside in their newly-furnished apartment, Southmore, Bendict avenue and Darby Road, South Ardmore.

John Brehm Is One of The Soloists in Musical Comedy

John Brehm will sing one of Samuel Shire's new songs upon the occasion of the presentation of "Up in the Air," a musical comedy of merit, to be staged at St. James's parish house, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. The song to be sung by Mr. Brehm is one of the many pleasing vocal numbers of the show. Curtain will be at 8.30.

COFFEE SOCIAL

A coffee social will be held at the home of Arthur Wolvin, Haines Road, Edgely, this evening, for the benefit of St. Paul's Chapel, Edgely.

COUNTY, BOROUGH AND STATE TODAY ARE BALLOTING FOR MUNICIPAL AND LOCAL OFFICERS

Very Light Vote Polled
In Bristol Borough
Up Until Noon Today

A light vote is going to be polled in Bristol today and it is believed that the number of ballots cast in Bucks County will be small in comparison with the total number of those who are privileged to vote.

Voters in Bristol are choosing county and municipal officers and lack of contests has resulted in but little interest being manifested in the result. Up until noon today only 318 ballots had been cast in the nine election districts in Bristol Borough. This is an unusually light vote.

The number of votes cast in the various districts is as follows:

First ward, first precinct, 37; first ward, second precinct, 35; second ward, 54; third ward, 92; fourth ward, first precinct, 7; fourth ward, second precinct, 13; fifth ward, 39; sixth ward, first precinct, 19; sixth ward, second precinct, 22.

Voters are voting at large for Judge of the superior court, judge of court of common pleas, district attorney, prothonotary, director of the poor, and jury commissioner.

In Bristol the ballots are being cast for Justice of the peace, burgess, school director, town council, auditor, tax collector, judge of elections, inspector of elections and registration assessor. Voters of each ward are naming two councilmen as well as choosing officers to conduct the ward elections.

The polls today are open from seven o'clock in the morning until seven in the evening.

Miss Eleanor Weik Is Hostess to Her Friends

Miss Eleanor Weik, of 153 Otter street, was hostess to her many friends at a Halloween party given in Mohican Hall, Otter street, Saturday evening.

The hall was artistically trimmed with the orange and black crepe paper streamers, draped from the corners to the center of the room, and orange paper lanterns covered the lights. Corn shocks were placed at the windows, while autumn leaves, ghosts, black cats were conspicuous around the walls. The majority of the guests wore masquerade costumes, and much merriment was had trying to guess the different boys and girls.

McDonald's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing and during the evening different games were played. Prizes were awarded for the block dance and they were given to Mary McCann and Genevieve Finney. Prizes were also given to Margaret Flannigan and Margaret Oliver, for the best dressed costumes. Everyone present had a good time and at a late hour refreshments were served to the following guests:

Margaret Flannigan, Rose Flannigan, Marie Swank, Rita Barnfield, Jane McElroy, Margaret McCarthy, Mary McCann, Mary Lynn, Margaret and Catharine Oliver, Marie Lippincott, Arabelle and May Barrett, Josephine Junod, Anita Gallagher, Frances Waters, Mary Divaney, Genevieve Finney, Peggy Breece, Mary McGee, Marie Craven, Miriam Dougherty, Mary Harton, Blanche Ellis, Mary Hoarty, Aletha Myers, Matharine and Eleanor Weik, Maurice Mulligan, Leonard Bassett, James Blanche, Jack McGinley, Harold Snyder, Hulbert Nelson, Joseph McDevitt, Herman Leinheiser, Francis McGee.

John Blanche, Walter Kelly, Charles McGee, Jack Dugan, Francis Craven, Mark Dupont, William Walker, James Robertson, William and Joseph Lynn, Joseph Roe, William Gosline, Russell Marshall, Francis Lippincott, Thomas Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. George Zebly, Mr. and Mrs. R. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. John Ennis, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weik, Mrs. Walter Buchler, Mrs. Katharine McDonald, Miss Charlotte Flannigan, Joseph Jennings, Dennis Gallagher and Miss Mary Welsh, all of Bristol; and Thomas Adams, of Roebing, and Charlotte Cadwallader, of Yardley.

AVIATION NOTES

The first Pittsburgh-built, all metal monoplane has been pronounced a decided success following test flights at the Pittsburgh-Butler airport. Captain H. V. Thaden, designer of the four-place cabin craft, expressed himself as well pleased with the plane's performance. The plane is built of corrugated metal sheets and tubing, has the new monosque fuselage which does away with internal struts and cross members, and is equipped with the latest type stabilizer. The latter permits the ship to be flown "ghost" fashion, without the aid of human hands.

Allentown's air-minded youngsters, comprising the personnel of the Junior Aviation League, received their first airplane ride last week. To stimulate competition among the boys, a plane trip has been offered as a prize for the boy constructing the best model plane.

National Leaders Watch Vote Today in New York And Also in Virginia

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Political Washington will look tomorrow to Virginia and to a lesser extent to New York City to furnish the first nationally significant indications of political trends since the Presidential election and the most reliable guide post to date in the approach to the struggle next year for control of Congress.

Some Democratic leaders were agreed today with Republicans that a sharp cut in the normal Democratic majority in Virginia State election would show that the Republican capture of four southern States last year was not merely a temporary gain, but the beginning of a definite drift toward the two party system which would spell the end of Democratic regularity in the once Solid South.

The opposite major party leaders were also agreed that failure by Mayor Walker to poll a clear majority of all the votes cast in New York City would indicate a weakening of Tammany that might foreshadow a more certain Republican record for New York State in national affairs and possibly eliminate Governor Roosevelt next year as the foremost Democratic Presidential "contender."

While Republican leaders appeared to have little encouragement from New York City they assured President Hoover on the strength of late reports from Virginia that there was a very good chance of cutting down the normal Democratic majority of 70,000 to one of 30,000 votes. Harry F. Byrd, the present Governor, was elected four years ago by a majority of more than 60,000, but was not energetically opposed.

Anything less than a 30,000 majority for John G. Pollard, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, over William Moseley Brown, a coalition candidate, would be hailed by the Republicans as something of a triumph in a progressive campaign to include the Old Dominion with other doubtful "border States," such as Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma. It would make certain a vigorous contest to unseat Senator Carter Glass, an outstanding Democratic leader, when he comes up for re-election next year.

The Democratic formula was that anything under a 20,000 Democratic majority in Virginia would result in "a determined Republican fight" on Senator Glass and possibly on Senator Furnifold M. Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina, and that a reduction of the Democratic margin to 10,000 would be a warning that Senator Glass was in "serious danger." Since the present coalition opposition is the most formidable the Democratic State organization has had, "some reduction" in the party vote is expected by its leaders.

PLANE TALK

By HARRY A. SUTTON
Of the Technical Staff,
The Aviation Corporation
(Written Expressly for International News Service)

6. Flying Instruments

Aircraft instruments are divided into two classes; engine and navigation. Like stick, rudder and throttle, training planes are equipped with duplicate sets, one each in the student pilot's and instructor's cockpit, allowing dual control.

Tachometer, thermometer and pressure gauges are the usual engine instruments. The tachometer registers the speed of the engine in hundreds of revolutions per minute; the thermometer gives the temperature of the lubricating oil, and pressure gauge the oil feed pressure. Fuel gauges visually record the consumption of gasoline.

Most important of the navigation instruments are the compass, the altimeter and the air speed indicator. There are also bank, turn, and climb indicators. The plane's altitude is registered by the altimeter in hundreds of feet while the air speed indicator gives in miles per hour its rate of passage through the air.

The turn indicator records the plane's horizontal deviations from straight flight. By the bank indicator, the pilot may determine whether his bank is correct for the radius of turn. Because their function is related, these two instruments are usually combined into one. The climb indicator records the plane's rate of ascent or descent in hundreds of feet per minute.

Tachometer, altimeter, compass and air speed indicator are the instruments most frequently consulted by the pilot. By them he keeps close watch on four important factors of flight; the motor's performance, the altitude, the course and the distance traveled.

(The next article of Plane Talk will deal with the weather and its influence on flying.)

FOR BROADER EDUCATION

Several years ago the American Council on Education approved a plan whereby students in this country might arrange to spend their third college year studying in some foreign university without losing their scholastic standing in the home institution. The scheme promised to stimulate travel and study abroad, to benefit the student in an educational way and to contribute something toward a better understanding between nations.

Students in general are being encouraged to spend their junior year in study abroad, paying their own expenses where they are not recipients of scholarships. With steamship rates for students at their present low rate and living costs in Europe and Asia so much lower than they are here, foreign study is within the reach of many students.

A great deal of the ill-feeling between nations has always been due to misunderstanding of the sort the interchange of students should do much to banish. American students who study with Europeans in foreign universities are bound to gain a great deal, not only in the way of academic learning but in knowledge of life abroad.

Hundreds of students from Central and South America, the European countries and the Far East come to the United States each year to study and travel, and in Europe it has long been the custom to augment one's education by study in one of the other European countries.

There is a great deal of similarity between race fears and the superstitious fear of darkness. Both are usually products of the imagination.

CRUX OF THE FARM PROBLEM

Up to the very hour that agriculture fell ill of that strange malady which has kept it in the sick bed for more than a decade farmers chanted the blessings of machinery and improved farming methods which increased the production per acre and reduced the demand for farm labor. Even economists saw the agricultural millennium just ahead.

Then came the crash. The war over, leaving no armies to consume wheat and beef, and bankrupt nations with no money to buy them, American farmers found that they were producing far more than they could sell at a price that would pay the interest and taxes on farms purchased at inflated prices. Farming efficiency had overreached itself, throwing the tiller of the soil back to where he was before the conception of mass production on the farm.

So Prof. C. W. Rubel, of the University of California, had better reason to be pessimistic than optimistic when he traveled through the Middle West and saw farm machinery doubling the area one man can cultivate. A few years ago that would have appeared in the light of a miracle; now it approaches the tragic.

Agriculture's failure to maintain a happy medium between unprofitable and underproduction and equally unprofitable overproduction is at the root of the farm problem. It makes a hard nut to crack.

There wouldn't be any love at first sight if the first sight was at 7 a. m.

Selfishness has its uses. If it didn't exist, divorce lawyers would starve.

Copyright, 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone Natural Color Picture, Adapted from Avery Hopwood's play, "The Gold Diggers."

Violet, a chorus girl, and her fiancé, Wally, enlist the aid of Jerry, understudy to the star, in getting the consent of Wally's uncle to their marriage. Jerry allows Uncle Steve to mistake her for Violet, and assumes the role of a scheming woman so that he will be happy to let someone else marry Wally. Black, Steve's lawyer, suggests that they take Jerry out to get acquainted before making a final decision, and Jerry's friend, Mabel, comes along. The gold-digging starts, and is brought to a climax by a party which Steve is to pay for. Believing that her plan is failing, she dismisses the party and asks Steve to come back later for a talk.

"No evening would be complete for me without this," she explained, inhaling the thin wisp of smoke that curled up from the table with obvious delight. "You know, somebody once told me that I must have some Oriental blood in me. He said—not only my appearance, but my taste, proved it to him. What do you think, Uncle Steve?"

"I'm really no judge, Jerry, never having been there, and knowing little about it as it is."

"I should think you would have had several trips around the world—you have the money."

"Yes, but not the inclination."

"This is awfully hard to tell you, Uncle Steve."

I've always been so sunk in the business that I never thought I could take the time. Of course, I've been to Europe often, but these days one goes to Europe—as one goes to a summer resort, almost.

"That's true, Uncle Steve. One year I went over twice—with friends of mine." Jerry looked embarrassed as though she had allowed something to slip past her which she had intended to keep as a secret.

As they were about to sit down, the telephone rang, and Jerry went into the bedroom to answer it.

"Is this my Jerry?" It was Wally's voice.

"Yes," she said softly.

"Well, is everything all right? Just answer yes or no."

"Not yet."

"You mean he's there now?"

"Yes, of course."

"How much longer shall I keep you?"

"Don't be in any hurry. I don't know how long this session is going to last, and I intend to do nothing to hurry it. I've got lots to do, you know."

"Gee, Jerry, I hope it will be all right."

"Leave it to me—and take another ride with Vi. The air will do you both a world of good."

"O. K. So long."

"So long—and take your time."

When she had hung up, she explained to Lee that it was her friend, Topsy, who had called to tell her that if she was late for rehearsal tomorrow, to make some excuse to the manager.

"Topsy is constantly late at the theatre," she told him.

"Do they let her get away with it?"

"Well, she gets called down, and then promises never to do it again, but by the next time she's completely forgotten what happened the time before. Mabel always has to be dragged in too, but between Vi and me, we manage her all right. She's losing her pep—with her figure."

"She seemed to have plenty of pep tonight," Uncle Steve put in.

"A little too much for poor Blake, perhaps," added Jerry, pouring out two drinks and giving one to Uncle Steve.

"We'll drink to Mabel—and her lost figure," she said, raising her glass.

Uncle Steve touched his glass to hers and drained the contents. Jerry sipped a little of hers and set it down. Then she sank down on the sofa, and Uncle Steve sat down beside her.

"Just another drink to Mabel before we start our talk," she said, pouring him another cocktail. Again he drained the glass, and now he sat back contentedly, leaning his head against the sofa, closing his eyes dreamily. She quickly

It seems to take some girls a very long time to learn that they can get as much benefit out of the daily dozen as they can out of walking home.

Professor: "What do you find the hardest thing to deal with?"
Student: "An old pack of cards."

Jack had just asked Jill to marry him, and she had murmured "Yes."

"Jack, dear," she ventured, after a long silence, "am I the only girl — The young man's arms tightened about her.

"Jill," he interrupted fiercely, "don't ask me whether you are the only girl I ever loved! You know that as well as I do."

"That wasn't what I was going to ask you at all, Jack," she answered. "I was going to ask you if I was the
